Some people choose to purchase organic fruits or vegetables for their health benefits because farmers do not use chemical substances or pesticides during the process of growing them. However, organic foods are usually associated with high costs, resulting in some people not buying them as a part of their daily diet. For those who cannot afford to buy organic foods, is it really unhealthy to eat regular conventional foods? Luckily, some vegetables and fruits do not necessarily have any pesticides left behind after they are done growing, so people do not have to worry about the chemicals causing cancer. According to the Environmental Working Group (EWG) in the United States, chemicals are seldom found in certain organic or regular foods. For example, avocados and pineapples do not contain any pesticides, even though they are not organically planted, because it is quite impossible for pesticides to go into their skins. Asparagus is another chemical-free vegetable due to the fact that it has a natural substance that can break down pesticides. Broccoli contains natural pesticide materials that will produce an unpleasant smell or taste to keep insects away. Buying organic mushrooms is not necessary because they are usually grown indoors, and farmers rarely use chemicals to help them grow. The dark purple jackets of eggplants are like a protective coat that prevents chemicals from entering the vegetable. There are a variety of delicious fruits and vegetables that are planted without the use of any chemicals, or the chemicals that are used do not remain on these plants. As long as people choose the right foods, they can still enjoy eating non-organic foods and save money at the same time.

- (A) Eating organic food helps fight against cancer.
  - (B) Organic eating is pricey, but it's worth the price.
  - (C) How to keep insects from eating plants isn't easy.
  - (D) Certain foods don't need to be organically planted.
- A 42. According to the passage, why can some fruits and vegetables avoid containing pesticides?
- (A) They have a hard skin.
  - (B) They have a bad look.
  - (C) They have a delicious smell.
  - (D) They have a supply of water.
- C 43. According to the passage, which of the plants are usually grown indoors without using pesticides?
- (A) Avocados. (B) Eggplants. (C) Mushrooms. (D) Pineapples.
- B 44. According to the passage, which of the following statements is NOT true?
- (A) Asparagus can produce a substance that helps to break down pesticides.
  - (B) Broccoli should be organically planted due to its unpleasant smell and taste.
  - (C) Eggplants' dark purple skin can help to keep away from chemical substances.
  - (D) The thick skins of pineapples and avocados can stop pesticides from entering.
- A 45. Which of the following inferences can be drawn from the passage?
- (A) Eating healthy doesn't mean that people have to choose organic foods only.
  - (B) The chemicals used for growing plants continue to exist for all the plants.
  - (C) It's just an old wives' tale that pesticides are the major factor in causing cancer.
  - (D) People can still enjoy non-organic foods if they pay more money for high quality.

Have you ever heard the phrase "Big Brother is watching you"? The twenty-first century has seen an increase in the chances of being watched or monitored, that is, an increase in surveillance, in our daily lives. People are getting used to being monitored by cameras, having private messages inspected at work, and having conversations recorded by banks or other businesses. Surveillance can be a form of monitoring via electronic devices, such as security cameras, or via Internet interception, such as email monitoring. Whether surveillance is useful for society is the current focus of public debate. For those who support surveillance, they think it helps to protect social security, while for those who disagree with it, they worry about some issues regarding how surveillance can be regulated. For supporters, surveillance can be helpful for the authorities to gather information, prevent crimes, and protect citizens. They argue that surveillance is very important in terms of tracking criminals and terrorist activities. With the help of surveillance tools, information can be sent directly to a facial recognition system. This can, for example, automatically recognize suspects and direct the police to their location. Nevertheless, for opponents, surveillance can be considered an invasion of privacy. For this reason, human rights activists have argued against it. When the purpose of surveillance is used mainly for monitoring, they have expressed deep concern that the society may turn out to be a mass surveillance society, with limited or even non-existent freedom. For instance, people may not have anything to hide when they are monitored by cameras. The authorities could make people obey the rules based only on what they have seen from the cameras without asking for opinions or permissions.

D 46. What is the best title for this passage?

- (A) The Benefits of Surveillance
- (B) The Definitions of Surveillance
- (C) The Inventions about Surveillance
- (D) The Arguments about Surveillance

C 48. What is the third paragraph mainly about?

- (A) The human rights of party activists.
- (B) The method to inspect private emails.
- (C) The reason for concern about monitoring.
- (D) The changes made to protect our privacy.

B 49. According to the passage, which of the following statements is true?

- (A) People have found it alright to be monitored wherever they are.
- (B) The use of facial recognition systems can help the police to find criminals.
- (C) Human rights activists support the use of surveillance tools to help society.
- (D) The invasion of privacy in most cases is the major concern for the authorities.

D 50. Which of the following inferences can be drawn from the passage?

- (A) People have no doubts about the use of surveillance for their daily lives.
- (B) People who oppose surveillance like to live in a mass monitoring society.
- (C) The use of surveillance has given people more advantages than disadvantages.
- (D) The use of surveillance needs to consider people's privacy, safety, and freedom.
