Shopping malls have produced a revolution in American shopping and living habits. Before 1950, 41 were no malls, and now almost every small city has at least one. 42, shopping malls have become a part of American society and many people think of them 43 social centers. In a way, malls have taken the place of Main Street. All of the shops and most of the services which were 44 spread out over several city blocks are now in one place at the mall. Busy householders can save time by 45 their shopping at the mall. And people young and old with time on their hands, often say "Let's go to the mall!"

In the early 1970s, the Japanese began the construction of Aquapolis, the world's first semisubmersible floating city. They built it on the main Japanese island of Honshu and towed it south to Okinawa. There they 46 it at a 1975 exposition. Aquapolis can be raised or lowered in the water as a protection against violent storms. When lowered, most of the structure rests beneath the surface. This protects it from rocking 47 by high winds and surface disturbances. In its normal raised position, the structure contains three main areas. The first is the top part of the structure, which is high 48 the water level, and includes residential, administrative, and exhibition zones. The middle level is at the water line. It contains transportation facilities, including its own harbor. 49, beneath the water are storage and machinery zones. Aquapolis is a prototype of futuristic floating cities designed to run on solar, wind, and tidal energy. It uses a biological waste-water system, which disposes of sewage by means of a species of green algae, rather than by chemical means. Adjacent to the city is a large maricultural ocean ranch 50 contains thousands of fish. Using equipment located in onboard laboratories, scientists monitor the movements and behavior of these fish.

Originally they were called comic books, or comics for short. These were those pictures of cartoon stories with dialogue that became very popular with young people in the United States in the 1940s and 1950s. Despite their name, they were not always funny, and they were more like magazines 56 books because they were shorter, cheaper, and appeared 57 (often once a month) in newsstands at local stores. Many were about the adventures of superheroes such as Superman, Batman, and Wonder Woman. These were individuals with special powers who fought 58 evil and 59. The end of every story was never in doubt: the superhero, as the 60 of the "good guy," always defeated the "bad guys," or the characters that represented the evil forces in the world.

IV.Reading Comprehension:

Passage 1

Voice and text chat, in addition to instant messaging, are quickly becoming preferred ways of communicating with others online. For language learners, these forms of communication allow users to share ideas about themselves and the world in almost real time, and students can establish friendships with people from around the globe, and thus, it can be an easy way to learn languages and world cultures. However, care and consideration should be given when finding friends on the Internet because you really don't know who the person is at the other end. Thus, always use a nickname when chatting online and never give out personal information including your age, where you live, and the name of the school where you attend. Also, be careful about meeting online acquaintances in person, and if you do so, make sure it is in a public place and go with a friend or family member. Finally, contact local authorities if you feel you are in danger. Again, chatting with others can be a fun and educational activity if you use with care when doing so.

Passage 2

After die voyages of Columbus, the king of Spain still believed that India could be reached by sailing to the west, so he sent Ferdinand Magellan, along with ships and sailors, to seek the truth. They set out for what we now know as South America. Nobody could tell whether it was possible to get around or through South America. One ship left him, because the crews were too frightened to go farther. Magellan explored all down the coast and at last came to a great channel. We now call this channel the Straits of Magellan. They are at the southern end of South America. Magellan got through the channel, and then a great open ocean appeared before him. He called it the Pacific, which means peaceful, because it was smooth and calm.

Passage 3

There is a disease that used to cause people sick with it to lose their fingers, toes, and noses, little by little. It is called leprosy. Other people were afraid of catching it, so they sent the lepers to live by themselves. In one of the Hawaiian Islands called Molokai there were lepers living together in shacks without enough food or clothing. When a young man from Belgium named Father Damien heard about them, he wanted to help them. He went to Molokai and lived among the lepers, doing everything he could for them. He caught leprosy himself and died of it. He is now famous for his wonderful kindness to people who needed someone.

Passage 4

The La Brea tarpits, located in Hancock Park in the Los Angeles area, have proven to be an extremely fertile source of Ice Age fossils. Apparently, during the period of the Ice Age, the tarpits were covered by shallow pools of water; when animals came there to drink, they got caught in the sticky tar and perished. The tar not only trapped the animals, leading to the death, but also served as a remarkably effective preservant, allowing near-perfect skeletons to remain hidden until the present era.

In 1906, the remains of a huge prehistoric bear discovered in the tarpits alerted archeologists to the potential treasure lying within the tar. Since then thousands and thousands of well-preserved skeletons have been uncovered, including the skeletons of camels, horses, wolves, tigers, sloths, and dinosaurs.

Fear, which one seems able to escape completely, can be a good thing. It is a naltural, healthy reaction to danger. But sometimes we are afraid of things that aren't dangerous, such as speaking in public, failing a test, or being rejected. Don't let unhealthy fears keep you from getting the most out of life. First, admit what you fear and then share it with someone you trust. Instead of being looked down upon, you might be surprised to know how many other people share the same fears. Learning you are no alone will give your self-esteem a boost.

Beside, ask yourself, "What is the worst-case scenario?" Whether it be losing a contest or being turned down, the regret of missed opportunities can be even harder to bear. What's worse, you will never know what you might have accomplished. Finally, take small steps toward conquering your fears. If you fear public speaking, start by giving a small talk to a few people. You might never completely conquer your fear of certain things. True bravery is feeliag scared but doing what you have to do anyway.
